OVERVIEW

USAID STRENGTHENS PARTNERSHIPS WITH PRIVATE VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS WORLDWIDE

INTRODUCTION

Since 1939, Private Voluntary Organizations (PVOs) have been active in humanitarian work overseas and have a rich history of cooperation with the U.S. Government. Growing cooperation between the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) and the U.S. and international private voluntary community mirrors the U.S. Government's belief that the programs of those agencies embody the traditional ideas of the American people. The PVO Registry began on the eve of WWII as a means to identify nongovernmental and nonprofit organizations working in war-torn Europe. Today, 67 years later, PVOs are the vital development partners working independently and alongside USAID. The Voluntary Foreign Aid Programs: Report of Voluntary Agencies Engaged in Overseas Relief and Development (VolAg Report) presents an annual overview of their work. As of October 2005, 503 U.S. PVOs, 7 U.S. Cooperative Development Organizations (CDOs) and 55 international PVOs were registered and in compliance with USAID's registration requirements. This report provides a snapshot of each of these organizations, summarizing their mission and key financial information. The PVO Registry is available both hard copy and on the Web at www.usaid.gov | Keyword: PVO Registry.

THE VOLUNTARY, AUTONOMOUS NATURE OF PVOs

USAID values PVOs as partners in carrying out long-term, sustainable development and humanitarian relief activities. USAID recognizes the independent mission of PVOs, as well as their role in implementing USAID's programs. By joining forces, USAID and PVOs can do more together than either could accomplish alone.

One of the challenges inherent in such a partnership is achieving the right mixture of collaboration and independence between public and private spheres. A healthy degree of separation between the two is essential for the unique mission of each, but cooperation is also critical to the success of both. Thus, interdependence is the cornerstone of the USAID-PVO partnership. In keeping with USAID's emphasis on public-private partnerships, U.S. PVOs registered and supported by USAID are encouraged to contribute non-U.S. Government resources to cost-share with appropriate USAID-funded activities.

VOLUNTARY AGENCIES: A TRADITION OF SUPPORT FOR HUMANITARIAN AND DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE

USAID recognizes the significant role that PVOs play in providing humanitarian and development assistance in developing and transition countries. Although the PVOs registered with USAID vary markedly in size, scope, and capability, they share a strong commitment to improving the quality of life for people in need. In its work overseas, the PVO community demonstrates the traditional American values of pluralism, voluntary action, and concern for others. PVOs can foster sustainable self-help efforts at the community level, providing programs that directly broaden the participation of the poorest citizens in the social and economic decisions that affect their daily lives.

The involvement of U.S. PVOs in humanitarian aid began decades ago in response to the social consequences of war and natural disasters. As a result of their ability to respond quickly and effectively, PVOs emerged as leaders in disaster relief. Gradually, their efforts broadened from relief and emergency food distribution to longer-term, more sustainable development programs designed to address the root causes of poverty and disaster mitigation. This transition from short-term relief to long-term development programs strengthened the cooperation between USAID and the PVO community that had been growing since the 1970s. Today, many PVOs are engaged in both short-term relief and long-term development programs. The effort to bridge the gaps among humanitarian, transition and development assistance is increasingly important to USAID programs, and in particular to conflict mitigation. Many PVOs have the skills, experience, and innovative approaches to help address these priorities.

While continuing to respond to human needs in emergency situations, PVOs increasingly contribute their private resources to development activities essential to helping people in the developing world improve their quality of life. The development programs operated by PVOs promote broad-based economic growth and a more sustainable environment. PVOs also foster human capacity development, focusing on the attainment of health and education levels required for all citizens to contribute to and benefit from economic development. Their work encourages pluralism and the emergence of democratic institutions.

A SHARED BASIS FOR COLLABORATION

PVOs and USAID pursue shared priorities aimed at achieving effective sustainable development. Although the objectives of PVOs are not identical to those of USAID, their work contributes to the achievement of USAID's priorities in economic growth, agriculture, trade, natural resource management, education, health and population, and democracy and governance, as well as humanitarian assistance, food security, conflict and transition assistance, local nongovernment organization (NGO) strengthening, and gender and public-private alliances.

In coming years, USAID will continue to emphasize programs that build strong, free-market economies; stimulate agricultural development; support democratic participation and transparent, effective governance systems; encourage broad-based public education; and promote health and well-being. USAID supports strengthened partnerships between and among PVOs and their local NGO partners. By helping to build the organizational and technical capacity of local partners across multiple sectors, PVOs are making a critical contribution to sustainable development. USAID's partnerships with PVOs and NGOs help to ensure active local involvement in the development and delivery of responses to needs and concerns across all sectors.

LEVERAGING PRIVATE RESOURCES FOR DEVELOPMENT

PVOs make a vital contribution to USAID's foreign assistance programs. As data presented in this report indicate, the private resources devoted to international development by the PVO community exceed U. S. Government support. During fiscal year 2004, registered U.S. PVOs received $14.9 billion in annual private support. This was almost six times the amount they received in USAID support during the same period, which totaled $2.6 billion. Other U.S. Government agencies and international organizations provided an additional $2.5 billion, bringing the total support and revenue to $20 billion. For a detailed breakdown of support and revenue sources, see page 127.

NEW POLICIES AND SIMPLIFIED PROCEDURES STRENGTHEN USAID/PVO COLLABORATION

In 2005, two major changes impacted the PVO registration process. First, after several years of study and in consultation with the PVO Community, the Code of Federal Regulations, Registration of Agencies for Voluntary Foreign Aid, Title 22, Part 203 was revised in its entirety as of May 13, 2005. The revisions effectively streamline the Conditions of Registration and establish Registries for both U.S. and Non-U.S. (International) PVOs. The Conditions also formally announce the distinction of PVOs, CDOs, and international or non-U.S. PVOs. For more information and a complete list of the Conditions, see www.usaid.gov | Keyword: PVO Registration.

In 2005, two major changes impacted the PVO registration process.

Second, the requirement for PVOs to meet the 20 percent privateness rule was rescinded by Congress in the fiscal year 2005 appropriations process. Since 1986 the Foreign Assistance Appropriation Acts required that "none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by the Act for Development Assistance could be made available to any United States private and voluntary organization, which obtained less than 20 percent of its total annual funding for international activities from sources other than the United States Government." PVOs not meeting this requirement were ineligible to receive most forms of assistance in the form of government grants and cooperative agreements. While PVOs are no longer required to meet the privateness rule, they must maintain a private nature.

DOING BUSINESS WITH USAID

USAID utilizes various acquisition and assistance instruments to implement its activities. Contracts, grants, cooperative agreements and purchase orders are some of the instruments which are negotiated and signed worldwide by USAID. These instruments provide a variety of commodities and technical assistance to support the attainment of the Agency's objectives. Following are websites of interest for doing business with the U.S. Agency for International Development:

This document, commonly referred to as the VolAg Report, is the culmination of one year's effort by the Office of Private Voluntary Cooperation-American Schools and Hospitals Abroad (PVC-ASHA) staff to collect, validate, and disseminate a clear, factual report about the PVO community. We hope you find it a useful reference.

UNITED STATES

PRIVATE VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

REGISTRY 7

The rules governing the registration of nongovernmental, nonprofit agencies engaged in voluntary foreign aid are promulgated in Code of Federal Regulations, Title 22, Part 203. The Registry consists of the following agencies.

All descriptions of voluntary foreign aid activities were provided by USAID registered organizations.

A CALL TO SERVE INTERNATIONAL ACTS

Dr. Patricia J. Blair, President
601 Business Loop 70 W, Suite 153A
Columbia, MO 65203-1743
TEL: (573) 874-0268
FAX: (573) 442-5627
EMAIL: tblairacts@aol.com
WEB: www.acalltoserve.org

Promotes peace and understanding through institutional and individual capacity building, using the exchange of ideas, information, and resources. In 1992, ACTS established the Republic of Georgia's first nonprofit humanitarian aid organization, ACTS-Georgia, which exemplifies institutional capacity building and allows Georgians to help Georgians. ACTS has shipped more than $420 million in medication, supplies, and equipment and village clinic renovation through EUR/ACE state department grants. Diabetic care, emergency and disaster medicine, and women's and children's health are priorities. Sister-city links between Columbia, Missouri, and K'ut'aisi, Georgia, focus on public administration, business, education, health, art, and culture. ACTs is implementing the first USAID child survival grant in Georgia focusing on the most vulnerable regions of Imereti and Kvemo Kartli.

A SELF-HELP ASSISTANCE PROGRAM
ASAP

Mr. Tom Arsenault, President
58 Dover Trail
P.O. Box 2275
Peachtree City, GA 30269
TEL: (770) 632-7451
FAX: (770) 487-1048
EMAIL: asap@mweb.co.zw
WEB: www.asapafrica.org

Cultivates self-reliance in southern Africa. ASAP achieves this by working in partnership with rural communities to help people in their efforts to improve their own lives. Projects include rural microfinance, vocational/life-skills training, and education improvement. To help rural communities better care for the ever-increasing numbers of orphaned children and people suffering from HIV/AIDS, ASAP provides training in HIV/AIDS awareness, psychosocial support, and establishing nutritional gardens, including the cultivation and use of medicinal herbs. School fees for orphans are provided using a commodity exchange method to avoid stigmatization.

THE ACADEMY FOR EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT
AED

Mr. Stephen F. Moseley, President and CEO
1825 Connecticut Avenue NW
Washington, DC 20009-5721
TEL: (202) 884-8000
FAX: (202) 884-8400
EMAIL: web@aed.org
WEB: www.aed.org

Addresses human development needs from a multidisciplinary perspective through education, research, service, and advocacy. Under grants and contracts, AED operates programs in collaboration with governmental agencies, policy leaders, nongovernmental and community-based organizations, schools, and universities, as well as bilateral and multilateral donors. Working closely with such partners and clients, AED helps develop systemic, sustainable solutions to problems that impede development such as illiteracy, malnutrition, disease, and overpopulation. AED fosters positive changes through programs in education, health and nutrition, democratic and economic reform, and skills development. AED programs employ state-of-the-art techniques in classroom methodologies, training, research and evaluation, information and communication technology, management, behavioral analysis, and social marketing.

ACCION INTERNATIONAL

Ms. Maria Otero, President and CEO

EMAIL: wl@alliance-for-africa.org
WEB: www.alliance-for-africa.org

Assists refugees, the economically challenged, and the underserved to become self-sufficient, productive members of their communities. AAA works to promote human rights protection, humanitarian assistance access, health services, and environmental conservation. AAA's Uganda field offices provide humanitarian assistance to communities affected by years of fighting between government and rebel military groups. Children are often the victims of abduction and forced service in rebel military groups. AAA provides play therapy for these children as a way of helping them deal with the traumatic experiences they have endured. Other programs include HIV/AIDS prevention, adult literacy, and programs designed to develop sustainable local economic activity.

Connects resources from the business world, service clubs, hospital groups, corporations, foundations, churches, and individuals with people in need throughout the world. AI's two primary areas of focus are children's relief projects and medical projects in emerging countries. AI builds the capacity of hospitals in developing countries so they can serve the people in their area more effectively. AI also provides medical equipment and training for physicians and nurses, which significantly increases the amount and quality of care that a hospital is able to give. In addition, AI works to build the capacity of local governments, community members, and nongovernmental organizations to meet the primary and developmental needs of orphaned and vulnerable children in their communities.

Promotes permanency planning for children: first, in their own countries and within their own cultures; then, if that is not possible, through international adoption. Bethany's philosophy is to provide development support to existing programs in the country or to partner with in-country programs. The country then develops a new program that assists children and families and prevents institutionalization of children. Bethany provides counseling services, adoption, temporary foster care, and medical care. The organization also works in partnership with the government to ensure sustainability when Bethany's work is completed. Bethany pursues these goals through educational partnerships with universities, sending volunteers to the field, hiring qualified indigenous people, and providing local training programs.

Addresses child malnutrition in Leogane, Haiti. Malnutrition is responsible for about 60 percent of all child deaths in Haiti, and 42 percent of surviving children are permanently stunted. CNP has been active in all areas of child health since 2001. This is primarily a community-based nutrition program developed from theories of positive deviance in which caregivers are taught to use locally available resources to rehabilitate their malnourished children. Malnourished children and their caregivers, under the supervision of trained monitors, meet at the homes of volunteer mothers for an intensive two-week seminar to learn nutrition, feeding practices, and meal preparation. Children are followed for six months to ensure progress and 80 percent of children participating in the program have been rehabilitated. CNP works with Hopital Sainte Croix in Leogane to provide hospital care for severely malnourished children.

Helps children around the world break the cycle of poverty and become self-sufficient, contributing members of society. CHI has programs in India; Mexico; South Africa; Venezuela; and Indianapolis, Indiana. CHI is a place where children learn and achieve success with dignity. To achieve its objectives, the organization builds and operates nonresidential learning centers in impoverished urban neighborhoods. In these centers, children receive a rigorous education, nutritious meals, regular health care, and life-skills training. Character development focuses students on the values of respect, responsibility, independence, and integrity. Strict accountability for results, as well as total transparency, has produced very positive results, and CHI officials hope to implement similar centers in other countries.

Enables the poor to free themselves from poverty. Founded in 1985, Enterprise Development International is a Christian organization supplying technical assistance, training, and funding to indigenous partner agencies. These agencies provide training and business loans to qualifying nationals for microenterprise start-up and expansion. Loan capital is repaid and then reloaned within the community, creating opportunities for others to establish or grow their own small businesses. Once-destitute people are empowered to overcome poverty, hunger, inadequate housing, lack of education, and ill health. Enterprise Development International's programs have served more than 800,000 people in more than 40 countries, including the United States.

Helps indigenous peoples control and develop their assets and build the capacity to direct their economic futures in ways that fit their cultures. Indigenous issues are global, yet significant problem solving happens locally, where indigenous cultures play a critical role in providing solutions. Accordingly, First Nations, through its international arm, First Peoples Worldwide, follows a dual approach in its international projects. This approach means that First Nations generates advocacy and development capacity through its work at local field sites. It also supports, through a cross section of socially responsible investment venues, a corporate engagement strategy, information technology, and international networks.

Supports organizations in their provision of hospice and palliative care by raising funds and awareness for the need of end-of-life care in sub-Saharan Africa. FHSSA's vision is that all people care and have family support. The FHSSA strategic plan focuses on organizational capacity, resource management, partnerships, technical support, and advocacy. One focus of the strategic plan is the Partnership Initiative, which matches African health care programs with U.S. health care organizations, faith-based organizations, and other community organizations. The goal of the partnerships is to form mutually beneficial relationships that lead to an exchange of expertise and insight, and to have U.S. organizations provide avenues of funding and other forms of assistance to their African hospice twins. To date, more than 40 partnerships have been established.

Institutes programs and solutions that bring collaboration between the private sector, and the academic sector that are applied at the global, regional, and local levels in the areas of technology, logistics, humanitarian impact, and capacity building. Fritz Institute has identified several issues that limit the ability of humanitarian relief organizations to tackle the challenges of disaster relief, including instances where few staff has access to formal education for professional careers in humanitarian aid; little research has been done on the optimal structure or operations practices; and the private sector plays a limited role, and primarily only during the emergency phase of disasters. Therefore, the organization works toward building a capacity-strengthening network, enabling public-private partnerships, and improving logistics and technology capability.

Improves relationships between the United States and Russia through a public-private initiative addressing Russia's urgent declining population problem. FOR is partnering with the World Health Organization Collaborating Center in Reproductive Health in Atlanta, Georgia, and the Moscow Oblast Ministry of Health to reform Russia's reproductive and perinatal health care delivery system and develop state-of-the-art perinatal health care facilities. In Russia, more than half of all maternal and infant deaths occur during labor, delivery, or during the first week of birth. When FOR's plan at the Moscow Region Perinatal Center is completed, it will be possible to reduce maternal and infant mortality rates by up to 50 percent.

Provides humanitarian goods to developing or distressed areas of the world. GA has focused most of its efforts on assisting the New Independent States and Eastern Europe, with special emphasis on children at risk. Whenever possible, indigenous groups are selected to manage the distribution of humanitarian aid. GA's goal is to provide temporary assistance while people achieve self-sufficiency through privatization of industry and free trade. By networking with other private voluntary organizations, GA has been able to assist in countries and regions that otherwise—for the most part—would be ignored.

Works with people in 50 countries to end hunger and poverty and care for the environment. Project participants are given animals and plants that suit their needs, such as cows, goats, sheep, llamas, water buffaloes, bees, and tree seedlings. Participants also receive training in sustainable agriculture and livestock management. Each recipient "passes on the gift" of animal offspring, seeds, skills, or other resources to neighbors. HPI's projects emphasize self-reliance, education, gender equity, peace, agroecology, and animal well-being. Other initiatives focus on HIV/AIDS, microenterprise, and social orphans. HPI has projects in five regions: Africa, Asia/South Pacific, Central/Eastern Europe, Latin America/Caribbean, and North America.

Provides wheelchairs and mobility aids to disabled persons living in poverty in developing countries. Hope Haven is an innovative, volunteer-intensive, and cost-effective program that collects discarded wheelchairs and refurbishes and delivers them to poor people in 98 countries. Wheelchairs are the critical starting point for empowering the world's most dependent citizens because they help provide access to education, job training, and income. The organization manufactures new pediatric wheelchairs for children with severely disabling conditions since the supply of children's wheelchairs does not meet the overwhelming need. Hope Haven offers global leadership through a network of individuals, relief agencies, and government leaders to address the needs of the estimated 20 to 100 million people with disabilities worldwide.

Shares knowledge, skills, and experience with Russian medical practitioners. IHPA's principal vehicle for information sharing is professional exchanges with physicians who, on a voluntary basis, spend time with colleagues in Russian regional centers in lectures, seminars, and clinical rounds. The disease areas IHPA concentrates on are major contributors to premature mortality and the dramatic demographic decline in Russia. These include cardiovascular disease, tuberculosis, HIV/AIDS, and diabetes. Russian colleagues have imparted the material IHPA brings them to large numbers of frontline physicians through the Russians' own obligatory postgraduate medical education programs. IHPA has interacted with more than 6,000 Russian physicians and sponsored nine groups of Russian physicians to attend centers in the United States.

Continues to expand its services in new countries and to provide education, clinical services, and updated equipment in its host countries. During the past year, ICHF has provided cardiac surgery to more than 225 children in 7 countries: Belarus, China, Colombia, Croatia, Nicaragua, Nigeria, and Peru. ICHF has donated in excess of $1.5 million in medical goods and services. ICHF's education programs in Memphis, Tennessee, and abroad have involved more than 500 physicians, nurses, and technicians. ICHF believes that such a program is beneficial to the health and welfare of far more children with heart disease than those for whom it merely provides operations. The education ICHF gives to its colleagues and the equipment it donates to these countries continue to help the children even after ICHF has departed.

Improves the lives of the rural poor in developing nations through agricultural and economic development. IDE views rural farmers as entrepreneurs capable of producing high-value crops with the right help. IDE empowers rural farmers to pull themselves out of poverty by providing essential tools, such as training, technologies, capital, and market entry. The organization focuses on water as a starting point for alleviating poverty. Simple, low-cost water technologies improve agricultural production and increase market participation. IDE's efforts have resulted in some 2 million families having access to low-cost water technologies. These technologies have enabled families to become more efficient agricultural producers, increasing their annual net income by between $100 and $1,000.

Improves the health and well-being of underserved people in rural South Asia. From its base in Boston, Massachusetts, and its offices in India, and Nepal, volunteers carry out IHO-initiated public health programs. Over the past 10 years, IHO has developed a cost-effective Self-Help Model for improving health in the poorest communities of South Asia. Formed in 1992 by a group of expatriate South Asian public health professionals in the United States, IHO has facilitated volunteers who put in the time and skills toward developing interdisciplinary approaches to health problems that work in rural South Asia. Each of the founders had an interest in health and community development in this region, and each wished to volunteer his or her personal expertise to influence these issues directly. By formalizing and expanding their personal and professional contacts in the United States, India, and Nepal, the IHO founders have been able to develop a large multidisciplinary network of health experts who may be called upon to help design and implement its programs.

Empowers poor communities worldwide to solve their most urgent problems and increase their level of self-sufficiency. OI selects, trains, and supports indigenous community organizers to facilitate this process throughout Asia, Africa, the Caribbean, and the Americas. Community residents become the main actors in every phase of their own development, from identifying needs and priorities to planning, implementing, and evaluating solutions. Communities address a variety of issues, including health, education, and livelihood. A community organizer works in a village for approximately five years or until the community has developed the skills and confidence necessary to sustain the development process. The organization supports programs that enable literacy and child survival. More than 450 teachers in the developing world participate. OI provides consultancy and field training to other institutions.

EMAIL: info@playingforpeace.org
WEB: www.playingforpeace.org

Uses the game of basketball to bridge social divides and develop leaders in conflict and post-conflict regions. PFP was founded on the premise that "children who play together can learn to live together." PFP operates programs in the Middle East, South Africa, and Northern Ireland that bring children together from different backgrounds to form positive relationships, develop leadership skills, and improve their futures. A key component to PFP's effectiveness is that the programs target children aged 10-14. These children are old enough to pick up the basics of the sport, but young enough where many prejudices have not yet been cemented. Through the power of sport, education, and the strategic integration of public diplomacy, PFP is altering the pattern of preconceived prejudice and equipping children with the skills and education to address the serious social and health issues they face.

Strengthens the capacity of local organizations to meet community needs in dozens of countries throughout Asia, Africa, and Latin America. PACT is a premier, networked, global organization. Its work is firmly rooted in the belief that local communities must be the driving force in ending poverty and injustice. To achieve this, PACT works in partnership with local organizations and leaders in a wide variety of sectors. PACT strengthens their capacity to be effective advocates and service providers; helps them connect to information and resources; become accountable to stakeholders; and develop links with local governments, businesses, and the larger global community. PACT's activities are supported by grants and contracts with USAID, bilateral and multilateral organizations and foundations, and PACT's revenue from its short-term consulting and product design.

Alleviates the suffering of refugees, displaced people, and disaster victims by providing sustainable shelter solutions and community rehabilitation. SFL programs focus on the potential of people and their communities, and help them become self-sufficient. SFL has a long track record in shelter construction, disaster mitigation, infrastructure projects, community development, and emergency relief distribution. Infrastructure projects include schools, clinics, roads, bridges, and water supply systems. Community participation, respect for traditional customs, use of local resources, introduction of appropriate and sustainable technologies, and incorporation of disaster mitigation measures, where applicable, are integral parts of SFL programs.

Operates an extensive range of humanitarian and development assistance programs in Vietnam with its sister organization Health and Education Volunteers. This includes providing prosthetic and orthotic devices and rehabilitation services to needy people in Vietnam, with a major focus on reaching needy people with disabilities in rural areas through outreach visits. To date, VNAH has provided some 80,000 poor Vietnamese with assistive devices. Equally important are VNAH's efforts to improve policies and programs for disabled people through technical assistance and training to the Vietnamese government. These efforts have led to the Vietnamese government enacting a progressive national ordinance on disability, modeled after U.S. law, as well as a national barrier-free design code and standards.

Combats poverty by helping small producers and other entrepreneurs build sustainable businesses that create jobs and increase productivity, market opportunities, and incomes. For more than 40 years, EWV has achieved this by expanding access to appropriate technologies, technical assistance, knowledge, and finance. EWV programs use a business-like approach to enterprise creation and development based on the "value chain," which includes the steps of production, processing, and marketing that add value to products. By helping small producers obtain expert advice, value-adding technologies, and access to credit enjoyed by their larger competitors, EWV programs level the playing field and enable microentrepreneurs to develop their own competitive business advantage.

REGISTRY 157

All descriptions of voluntary foreign aid activities were provided by USAID registered organizations.

ACTION CONTRE LA FAIM
ACF

Mr. Benoit Miribel, Executive Director
4, rue Niepce
75014 Paris
FRANCE
TEL: (33-01) 43 35 88 88
FAX: (33-01) 43 35 88 00
EMAIL: acf@actioncontrelafaim.org
WEB: www.actioncontrelafaim.org

Fights hunger by providing emergency assistance and by linking relief and development in four areas of expertise: nutrition, food security, health, and water sanitation. ACF intervenes either during a crisis through emergency programs, or after a crisis through rehabilitation programs. The organization engages in public education and advocacy efforts relating to hunger issues around the world. Together with its four sister organizations, ACF-International Network works in 40 countries worldwide and adheres to a charter of principles that forms the foundation of its humanitarian work: independence, neutrality, nondiscrimination, free and direct access to affected populations, professionalism, and transparency.

ACTIONAID

Mr. Feisal Hussain, Head, Partnership Development Unit
Hamlyn House, Macdonald Road
Archway, London N19 5PG
UNITED KINGDOM
TEL: (44-207) 561 7576
FAX: (44-207) 272 0899
EMAIL: mail@actionaid.org.uk
WEB: www.actionaid.org

Works with the poor and marginalized people to eradicate poverty by overcoming the injustice and inequity that cause it. ActionAid, the third largest development agency in the United Kingdom, addresses the root causes of poverty and improves the quality of lives. The organization tackles the causes and effects of absolute poverty through long-term development programs and influencing work. ActionAid works directly with local communities and organizations, helping to ensure that basic needs are met, promoting basic rights as the focus in all its work, and providing emergency assistance when necessary. ActionAid, based in London, works through local organizations in more than 30 countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Caribbean and has a lobbying office in Washington, D.C. There are ActionAid organizations in France, Greece, Ireland, Italy, and Spain.

AUSTCARE

Mr. Michael Smith, CEO
69-71 Parramatta Road, Locked Bag 15
Sydney NSW 1450
AUSTRALIA
TEL: (61-02) 9565-9100
FAX: (61-02) 9550-4509
EMAIL: cstroppolo@austcare.org.au
WEB: www.austcare.org.au

Assists refugees, displaced people, returnees, and those affected by landmines to rebuild their lives through the delivery of development programs in partnership with local communities and other agencies. AUSTCARE is working in 10 countries throughout the world to implement development programs that reduce poverty, build local capacity, and enhance human security.

BRITAIN-NEPAL MEDICAL TRUST
BNMT

Ms. A.G. Peck, Company Secretary
130 Vale Road, Export House
Tonbridge, Kent TN9 1SP
UNITED KINGDOM
TEL: (44-173) 236 0284
FAX: (44-173) 236 3876
EMAIL: bnmtuk@compuserve.com
WEB: www.britainnepalmedicaltrust.org.uk

Assists the people of Nepal to improve their health. BNMT does this by working in partnership with Nepal's Ministry of Health, international and local nongovernmental organizations, local committees, and communities to establish and maintain sustainable basic health services. The organization does this through training and capacity building, people's empowerment, advocacy, and institutional development and strengthening. BNMT, in existence since 1968, supports four health components: tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS, other infectious diseases, reproductive health, and essential drug supplies.

CANADIAN LUNG ASSOCIATION

Ms. Deirdre Freiheit, President and CEO

FAX: (1-613) 569-8860
EMAIL: info@lung.ca
WEB: www.lung.ca

Works for the promotion of respiratory health and the eradication of tuberculosis (TB). Established in 1900 to control the spread of TB and provide better services for TB patients nationally, the association now leads and participates in national and international research, prevention, education, and advocacy initiatives. As Canada's constituent member of the International Union Against Tuberculosis and Lung Disease, and the secretariat of the Stop TB/Canada Initiative, the association makes important contributions to the global fight against TB. Its Strengthening the National Tuberculosis Program in Ecuador project is a recognized model for the implementation of international standard TB control in middle-income countries.

CANADIAN PHYSICIANS FOR AID AND RELIEF

Improves health care for children worldwide with a focus on war-torn and impoverished countries. Founded in 1995 by leading pediatricians in the United Kingdom, CAI complements other agencies and works with local people to develop hospital-based and tertiary care for the sickest infants and children. Such services are essential to the development of effective health care provisions accessible to the majority of the population in many poor countries. CAI campaigns for family rights—as outlined in international law and convention—in disadvantaged countries and areas of armed conflict, with the specific intention of promoting the well-being and protection of children.

Supports the poorest communities in their struggle to achieve a better life. Christian Aid is the official relief and development agency of 40 British and Irish churches. It works in over 60 of the world's poorest countries. The organization addresses the root causes of poverty through advocacy, campaigning, and education. Christian Aid tells the stories of those communities, the realities they face and the work they achieve together. Christian Aid has worked on long-term development projects where the need is greatest, working with people and communities regardless of race or creed, whether they are Christian, of various faiths, or people who do not claim a particular belief.

Works with people in need, especially refugees, displaced people, and children who are suffering because of war or poverty. CORD is a caring, Christian-based, nongovernmental organization characterized by a Christian ethos, professionalism, and concern for the underprivileged. Although much of CORD's work is operational, the organization encourages self-reliance and the strengthening of local structures, emphasizing personal empowerment even within refugee and emergency settings. CORD, a signatory to the Red Cross Code of Conduct and the European Union's Nongovernmental Development Organizations' Charter, works in partnership with the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, and other U.N. organizations.

Improves the lives of men, women, and children living in poverty, oppression, and insecurity, regardless of race, religion, gender, or political affiliation. CRN is involved in the rehabilitation of child soldiers in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). By August 2005, 700 children were rehabilitated. CRN builds schools for children in the region. The organization provides assistance to victims of sexual violence, and has assisted more than 1,000 women during the last year. Since CRN began its refugee program in 2000, more than 60,000 refugees have returned home to Rwanda. Together with its implementing partners, CRN has rebuilt and equipped 68 health clinics and one hospital in remote areas of DRC. CRN's fistula program in South Kivu increases and enhances the capacity to treat fistulas in eastern DRC by training local doctors in surgery, employing preventive measures, and using the newly built 100-bed fistula clinic.

Alleviates poverty through supporting relief, rehabilitation, and development initiatives. DAI, an international Christian organization, prefers to work with local partners instead of operationally. In relief work, DAI responds to man-made and natural disasters by providing food, water, clothing, medical help, and temporary shelter. Rehabilitation programs are designed to help displaced people resettle and focus on trauma counseling. In development, the focus is on building the self-reliance of the poor. The sectors for DAI's development work include food security, education, water, health, housing, and economic development. Women and children are given special attention, as they are often more vulnerable to poverty.

Contributes to building peace by reporting news that is useful, factual, and impartial to populations that are victims of violence or natural disaster and are otherwise cut off from independent media reports. Reporting impartial, independent, factual information professionally can help develop the conditions necessary for war-torn countries to return to peace and democracy. Media for Peace and Human Dignity grew out of a 1994 initiative by Swiss journalists who launched Radio Agatashya in the aftermath of the Rwandan genocide. The organization has operated similar radio projects in the Central African Republic, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Kosovo, Liberia, Tanzania, and East Timor.

Establishes and builds services for the mobility-disabled. POWER International works in low-income countries with people on the margins of subsistence. POWER International develops the physical infrastructure of services and helps local people build technical and managerial skills to run and manage these services when POWER International leaves the country. The organization empowers disabled people in Laos by fitting them with mobility aids, such as artificial limbs and wheelchairs, so they can become physically and economically independent. POWER International strengthens the capacity of self-help groups and represents the disabled in advocacy, awareness-raising, and managing services cost-effectively. POWER International's programs of capacity building operate in Mozambique, Zambia, and the Lao PDR.

Works to secure the just and peaceful transformation of violent conflict. Established as an international nongovernmental organization in 1985, IA works at national, regional, and global levels to enhance the capacity of individuals and peace networks, constituencies, and organizations to build sustainable peace. IA uses experience and knowledge of violent conflict to advocate policy changes that would address and contribute to the eradication of the root causes and symptoms of violence. In 2003, IA was involved in more than 40 projects in 15 African, Eurasian, and Asian societies. IA focuses on five specific global thematic issues: business, development, security, gender, and religion. IA's work is based on strong partnerships with local organizations, high-quality and shared conflict analysis, and rigorous adherence to codes of conduct.

Reaches out to more than 15,000 children per month by providing nutrition, education, and job skills to abandoned children, street children, AIDS-orphaned, and those who are destitute. It also provides support and feeding programs for HIV-positive mothers, and works with local governments to assist them in the caring for their at-risk populations. ChildsLife believes that the most effective way to help a child is to provide those things, however small, which make a direct impact upon his or her life. Headquartered in the Netherlands, ChildsLife works throughout the world with its largest programs in Kenya and Romania. ChildsLife's tailor-made approach to program design ensures that the organization's activities are based upon the direct needs of the children and their communities.

Works in the field of international development. Incorporated in 1957, WUSC is governed by a volunteer board of directors that brings together representatives from educational institutions, training organizations, WUSC alumni, and campus-based committees from across Canada. During the past decade, WUSC has evolved into one of the largest Canadian nongovernmental organizations involved in the implementation of technical assistance and training programs. Since 1978, WUSC has provided approximately 2,500 person-years of assistance to developing countries, and administered 5,000 person-years of academic and practical training programs. In partnership with the Canadian Centre for International Studies and Cooperation, WUSC acts as the Canadian recruitment agency for the U.N. Volunteer Program.

Helps societies torn apart by war to overcome conflict, and to build lasting peace. WSP promotes processes of consultation, research, and analysis with all sectors of society, including international assistance agencies and donors. WSP uses participatory research to enable everyone concerned to identify common challenges to peace, and reach consensus on solutions and priorities. WSP works in partnership with the United Nations, and draws its strength from a close network of country teams, partners, and friends with shared values and a commitment to building lasting peace. Building on more than a decade of field experience, WSP has learned that peace is sustainable only if it is forged by all parties involved in a conflict, with local actors playing the main role, and if it is based on understanding, trust, and a common vision for the future.
